Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Public School Methods, Vol. 3 The chapters in volumes Three, Four and Five of Public School Methods have been written for teachers in the grades above the primary and for those rural teachers who have classes that have been at least three years in school. The chapters comprise a strong series for daily use in the school room, a simple, practical guide in the various problems which are found in every hour of recitation, in every class. The work given in these last three volumes includes a discussion of methods of teaching all the branches required in the intermediate and grammar grades of the public schools, and, in addition, chapters on methods in construction work, drawing, domestic science and vocal music, and a large number of helpful type studies. The outlined work on each branch presents the methods of that branch in each of the grades in which it is studied; so whatever her grade the teacher will find specific help in the pages of these books. Correlated subjects are tied together by cross references, and a comprehensive index enables one to trace any subject throughout the volumes. Much of the work is in the form of type lessons, thus furnishing definite lesson plans which, with such modification as is necessary to meet local conditions, the teacher can use daily in her classes. The style is plain and forceful; technical terms have been avoided, and the constant aim of the authors and editors has been to make the work as practical and helpful as possible. The chapters on management and on methods in common branches were prepared by Mr. Sylvester, who, from his extended experience...
